| Response UACS is dedicated to using a variety of feedback systems to guarantee the quality of education. UACS continuously conducts end of the semester student surveys where they are asked to fill out questionnaires for each course and instructor once a semester, which enables thorough assessments of the quality of instruction and course material. To ensure and enhance the quality of teaching, the University undertakes the following activities: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Monitoring Student Grades and Progress: One of the primary indicators of teaching quality is student success during the academic year. UACS monitors this by evaluating the average grades of individual students, as well as the overall average grades of the student cohort for a given academic year. This analysis helps identify any anomalies or exceptional performances, enabling to propose and implement appropriate measures for improvement. Student progress data encompasses a variety of metrics, including GPA, year-to-year progression, probation status, graduation rates, and dropout rates. Since recently these data are also presented and discussed on the Quality Assurance and Self Evaluation Committee meetings.</li> <li>2. Analysis of the results of practical work: In order to graduate, a student is obliged to attend an internship during each academic year. UACS Career Center is in charge of assisting and providing internships for the students. After the completed activity, the student must submit a certificate for completed internship, in which are recorded the acquired knowledge and skills from the real working environment, and are evaluated by the employer. The opinions and suggestions from the employer can help in improving and updating certain activities, as well as retaining the practices that result with positive outcomes.</li> <li>3. Overall Annual Evaluation: UACS provides horizontal and vertical evaluation between the students, faculty, staff, and management. The evaluation is performed once a year. Through this evaluation, the students have the opportunity to share their opinions for the faculty members in a certain academic year, as well as for the overall services at the University, Records Office, Finance Office, Networking Office, Library, and IT Office.</li> <li>4. Quality Circle Meetings: Each school within UACS has Quality Circles, consisting of representatives of the Dean's Administration, representatives from the Student Office, and representatives of students from each year of study, to facilitate discussions about courses, professors, and various services. This collaborative forum allows for open dialogue and constructive feedback, fostering a continuous improvement culture within the institution. By involving both faculty and students, the Quality Circles ensures that diverse perspectives are considered in the evaluation and enhancement of educational quality. This thorough method of obtaining student input aids UACS in consistently enhancing its support networks and course offerings. In the reporting period September 2024-August 2025 two quality circles per school were held, one each semester. The information from the Quality Circles was discussed at the respective Faculty Meetings and at the meetings of the Quality Assurance and Self Evaluation Committee.</li> <li>5. Seminars and workshops for teaching improvements: Through the teaching improvement seminars and workshops, the faculty members have the opportunity to receive continuous support, for sharing good practices and training. These activities are provided at least once in the academic year. In the reporting period September 2024-August 2025 3 workshops were organized by the Quality Assurance and Self-Evaluation Committee, two of them in cooperation with the Vice Rector for Scientific Research and Internationalization, on topics related to quality improvement, teaching methods, new policies, research and publications, etc. (dates of the workshops December 23, 2024, March 13, 2025, June 3, 2025)</li> </ol> |                                                             |

6. Socialization Seminar: Through the Socialization Seminar, the new faculty members can learn about the teaching process at UACS, UACS culture, the grading system and how to use Moodle platform, and they can share ideas and experiences with other participants as well. The Socialization Seminar is usually organized semiannually. In the reporting period September 2024-August 2025, 2 socialization seminars were held on the following dates: (September 17, 2024 and March 5, 2025).
7. University Self-Evaluation: The University conducts a self-evaluation for each academic year, which records the strengths and weaknesses of the University in terms of leadership, strategies, focus on all stakeholders, measurement of learning outcomes, academic and administrative staff, and the educational process. According to national standards, the self-evaluation report should cover a three-year period; however, to enhance monitoring and responsiveness, UACS has decided to prepare these reports on an annual basis.

UACS provides updated programs compatible with the dynamic working environment. For that purpose, the University is in constant contact with the members of the Business Council. This body serves as a board that fosters collaboration and strengthens trust between UACS and the public. The UACS Business Council includes more than 170 companies, organizations, non-government organizations, and government bodies that are united by one goal – to provide better education for the young students. With the recommendation from the Business Council, UACS creates better and updated study programs, learning outcomes, and learning environments. To ensure systematic planning and implementation of quality processes, the Annual Calendar of Quality Assurance Activities for 2024-2025 was developed.

Response

UACS is committed to advancing and raising educational standards. The university enhances the course offerings by taking into account the demands of the Macedonian market as well as the procedures of the top universities in the world. Every study program, some of which are accredited by ACBSP, is recognised and compliant with the Republic of North Macedonia's legitimate legal rulings.

Employers, students, and other relevant stakeholders are encouraged and guaranteed to be included in the program-creation process by UACS. Examples of more significant institutional structures that guarantee their participation include the following:

- Evaluation of Faculty members
- Evaluation of all UACS services
- Employment contracts (below 70% evaluations are subject to termination of contracts)
- Complaints Policy
- Student satisfaction (survey on courses and academic staff)
- Info on internship and employment
- Cohorts matrix
- Student learning outcomes
- Business Council (company representatives) work alongside UACS in revising the study programs' scope prior to the accreditation submission. The council provides feedback on how well the study programs fit the economy's and society's transportation needs. They provide feedback on specific courses and syllabuses.
- Delta Mu Delta support (DMD members propose changes in programs, activities to satisfy project requirements, inspirational talks, job shadowing, international cooperation and events).

| Response: A dedicated body, Quality Assurance and Self-Evaluation Committee, within UACS, is responsible for the development and implementation of the Quality Assurance Policy. This Committee should ensure a systematic approach to upholding and improving educational standards, organize faculty training, and engage in various activities aimed at the continuous enhancement of the quality of the education at UACS. The body was established in November 2023, taking over responsibilities previously held by the Quality Control Center, which was established in 2018. This transition underscores the institution's ongoing commitment to enhancing its quality assurance processes. In addition, in 2025, a Decision was adopted on the Establishment of a Self-Evaluation and Quality Body at University American College Skopje, as well as amendments and supplements to the Decision on the Establishment of a Body for the Development and Implementation of the Quality Assurance Policy at University American College Skopje. To ensure systematic planning and continuous implementation of quality processes, the Annual Calendar of Quality Assurance Activities was developed as a guiding framework. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |

| Response To improve its study programs, the institution regularly evaluates data—including statistical data—generated by its quality assurance system. This data is taken from students' 360 evaluations, quality circles, facilities and equipment surveys, internship and employment opportunities, learning outcomes, and the business council. UACS conducts this on semi-annual and/or on yearly basis. The annual self-evaluation report is posted on UACS's website for public access, guaranteeing accountability and transparency in its procedures. Up to August 2023, the Annual Self-Evaluation Report was done in accordance with ACBSP standards. For the period from September, 2023 to August, 2024, two reports were made: one in accordance with the ACBSP standards and one in accordance with Macedonian requirements. Starting from September 2024 (AY2024-2025) only an annual self-evaluation report based on Macedonian requirements will be prepared, as ACBSP accreditation requires three-year reports.                                                                                                                                                                                                       |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |

| Response: SBEM is accredited by the international Accreditation Council for Business Schools and Programs and has undergone multiple evaluations by the ACBSP, which assesses business schools based on academic quality and continuous improvement. As part of the accreditation process, SBEM has participated in Quality Assurance Reviews (QAR) to ensure compliance with these standards, taking necessary actions such as implementing curricular changes, enhancing faculty development, and incorporating advanced assessment tools like Peregrine, an education technology company that supports continuous improvement through its learning solutions for higher education and professional development. ACBSP process: Upon receipt of an official letter from ACBSP outlining notes and conditions, UACS is granted a period of three years to address and rectify these issues. Once the necessary improvements have been made, a Quality Assurance Report is prepared and submitted via a platform specifically developed for ACBSP's use. The submitted report is then evaluated by the reviewers, who provide feedback based on UACS's efforts via email. To maintain this accreditation, the university is required to submit a Quality Assurance Report every three years.                            |                                                                                                                                                                            |

UACS continues to develop and revise study programs in close cooperation with students, alumni, industry representatives, state authorities, and professional organizations. This collaboration is structured through quality circles, a comprehensive multi-source evaluation system, alumni surveys, and the active involvement of Delta Mu Delta Pi Alpha, ensuring that student voices are consistently integrated. Industry perspectives are incorporated through the Business Council and UACS's membership in professional associations (e.g., AmCham, HR Association), while documented minutes of meetings provide evidence of active dialogue with stakeholders in the program modification process.

To maintain relevance UACS also employs a three-tiered approach to industry relevance:

- Formal alignment/accreditation (e.g., ACCA accreditation for the BSc in Audit and Accounting, internship agreements with employers).
- Student engagement with industry leaders through Delta Mu Delta Pi Alpha, where honorary members co-organize events such as the E-commerce Conference.
- Faculty relevance through adjunct faculty drawn from industry, professional memberships, and conference participation.

During the period 2024–2025, UACS initiated preparations for conducting structured exit interviews with graduating students, aimed at further strengthening feedback loops and gathering program-related suggestions. While the process is in its initial stages and not yet fully implemented, the groundwork has been laid to ensure that future programs will benefit from this enhanced mechanism for continuous improvement. In addition, the university explored the need for the establishment of interdisciplinary student clubs (e.g., Digitalization Club, Innovation and Design Club). While these specific clubs were not implemented, the planning process led to a broader strategic vision: the potential creation of the UACS Innovation Lab or Academy. The Innovation Lab/Academy, currently under consideration, is envisioned as a dynamic hub for creativity, applied research, and industry collaboration. Structured around several units (Research and Project Unit, Partnerships/Industry Unit, Innovation Center, Technical Support/Mentorship Unit, and Advisory Board), the Lab would connect academic knowledge with industry practice, offering students hands-on projects, mentorship, internships, and certification opportunities. Its objectives are anchored in four pillars—student development, industry collaboration, research excellence, and community growth. Importantly, whether implemented as clubs or as the Innovation Lab/Academy, UACS’s commitment to advancing student development, fostering industry partnerships, and ensuring program relevance remains unchanged. The Innovation Lab represents one possible strategic pathway, but UACS continues to evaluate the most effective format to ensure sustainable impact and alignment with institutional priorities.

Plans for 2026-2028:

The process of Exit Evaluation of graduated students to be completed, with the first exit interviews done in 2027.

In parallel, as stated above, UACS plans to advance its consideration of the Innovation Lab/Academy, as a comprehensive hub for creativity, applied research, and industry partnerships. During this period, feasibility studies, stakeholder consultations, and pilot activities will be undertaken to determine the most effective format. If these studies/consultations/activities confirm the relevance and sustainability of the Innovation Lab/Academy, it will be formally established within this timeframe.

Response

UACS is guided by the 3-I Principles:

- International Faculty;
- International student body;
- International curricula, textbooks, and teaching supplements.

UACS tries to achieve this by incorporating external expertise and aligning its programs with best foreign practices and experiences. UACS collaborates with academics, industry professionals, and visiting lecturers from institutions worldwide. The integration of external expertise provides students with diverse perspectives and up-to-date knowledge in their respective fields. Examples of this practice include:

1. International Week: Usually held in April every year

2. Visiting Lecturers: UACS regularly invites visiting lecturers from international universities to conduct classes and workshops.

3. Guest Speakers: Industry professionals are often invited to speak on current trends and practices, providing students with practical knowledge and real-world applications of their studies.

4. Research Collaboration: Faculty members at UACS collaborate with international researchers on various projects, enriching the academic environment and contributing to the global exchange of ideas (ERASMUS, CEEPUS, etc.)

Alignment with Best Foreign Practices:

UACS aligns its study programs with the best foreign practices by incorporating international standards and benchmarks. This alignment ensures that the programs are not only competitive but also meet the expectations of global employers and academic institutions. The following practices exemplify this alignment:

1. Dual Degree Programs: UACS offers dual degree programs in partnership with international universities, such as the University of Rome "Tor Vergata" and the Rennes School of Business. These programs provide students with the opportunity to earn degrees recognized both locally and internationally.

2. International Accreditation: UACS is accredited by the Accrediting Council for Business Schools and Programs (ACBSP) in the USA. This accreditation guarantees that the programs adhere to high educational standards and best practices observed worldwide.

3. Curriculum Development: The curriculum at UACS is continuously updated to reflect the latest advancements and trends in various fields. This process involves benchmarking against leading international programs and incorporating feedback from external reviewers and industry experts.

Use of References:

The study programs at UACS utilize a wide range of references, including textbooks, research papers, case studies, and industry reports, to ensure a comprehensive and well-rounded education. These references are carefully selected to provide students with a solid theoretical foundation and practical insights. Examples include:

1. Textbooks and Literature: Courses at UACS use textbooks and supplementary literature from leading authors and publishers, ensuring that students have access to high-quality academic resources.

2. Research Papers: Faculty members incorporate recent research findings into their teaching, exposing students to cutting-edge knowledge and developments in their fields.

3. Case Studies: Real-world case studies are used extensively in the classroom to illustrate practical applications of theoretical concepts and to develop critical thinking and problem-solving skills among students.

2.8. Higher education institutions monitor and periodically revise their study programs in order to achieve the set goals and meet the needs of students and the social community. The audit is aimed at continuous improvement of study programs. All concerned participants should be informed about the activities that are planned or undertaken based on the audit.

Reports on Conducted Lectures or Information on Student Attendance; Indicators and Conclusions; Overview of revised study programs in the last five years with information about the nature of the amendment, the reasons for the changes, and expected results.

Response

Monitoring and Revision:

When applying for re-accreditations, UACS conducts audits of its study programs to ensure they align with the institution's mission and vision.

To enhance the quality of study programs and their implementation methods, criteria are defined for evaluating existing and proposing new study programs. Certain indicators are taken into account, such as: alignment of study and course programs with American and European universities, societal needs, student/teacher ratio, required spatial infrastructure considering the specifics of the study program, equipment, student workload, teacher workload, student assessment in line with learning outcomes, etc. More specifically, the re-accreditation process of study programs is done every 5 years, when a review of existing study programs is conducted, and they are aligned with internal criteria. Every three years, evaluation reports are submitted according to the requirements of international accreditation. According to their requirements, teaching contents must be continuously adapted to changes in the environment and according to the needs of students. All identified needs for improvements derived from the 360 evaluation system and the measurement of learning outcomes are implemented in them.

Continuous Improvement:

The review process at UACS is aimed at continuous improvement of study programs. By analyzing feedback from students, faculty, and external stakeholders, UACS identifies areas for enhancement and implements necessary changes.

Communication of Activities:

UACS ensures that all concerned participants are informed about the activities planned or undertaken based on the audit. This includes communicating changes to study programs, new initiatives, and any other relevant information through official channels such as the UACS website, and meetings.

Examples and Evidence:

1. Accreditation of Study Programs: UACS's study programs are accredited by the Macedonian Agency for Quality of Higher Education and Accrediting Council for Business Schools and Programs (ACBSP), ensuring that they meet high educational standards.

2. Latest Financial Report and Rectors Report: They provide a comprehensive overview of UACS's activities, achievements, and areas for improvement, serving as a valuable resource for stakeholders:

<https://www.uacs.edu.mk/files/public-info-files/reports/rectors-report-2023-2024.pdf>

3. UACS Organizational Structure: The organizational structure ensures efficient management and coordination of study programs, facilitating effective monitoring and revision processes:

<https://www.uacs.edu.mk/files/public-info-files/documents/new-uacs-organizational-structure.pdf>

4. Masters and PhD Programs: The detailed information about Masters and PhD programs, including completed and ongoing programs, demonstrates UACS's commitment to offering diverse and high-quality educational opportunities

2.9. Statistics (number of courses held, number of students, grades, number and reasons for dropping out, etc.). They are regularly monitored and systematically analyzed.

Statistical data (number of courses held, number of students, average grades per subject, number and reasons for students dropping out, etc.), by academic years, in the last five years.

Response

UACS keeps statistical info about:

1. Number of Students: detailed records of student enrollment, including the number of students enrolled in each program and some demographic information.
2. Grades: grade data are analyzed to evaluate academic performance and identify areas for improvement.
3. Courses: course offerings by academic years and units.
4. Number and Reasons for Dropping Out: the University monitors dropout rates and informally investigates the reasons behind student attrition. The information about dropping out of students is submitted to the management of UACS, including the Rectors Office.

Future plans: 1) to develop a system for formal collection of information on the dropping out reasons (potentially through exit interviews) and develop strategies for retention and support; 2) to submit the information about dropout rates and the dropping out reasons to the Deans or the Academic Councils and/or Quality Assurance and Self-Evaluation Committee, so they can give suggestions for corrective measures and help develop or improve the strategies for retention and support.

The Quality Assurance and Self-Evaluation Committee: UACS recently changed the Decision for establishing the Quality Assurance and Self-Evaluation Committee in order to include in its authorities annual review of the above data and proposal of appropriate corrective measures to the relevant instances at UACS.

The data is systematically analyzed to identify trends, strengths, and areas for improvement. This analysis informs decision-making processes and helps UACS to continuously enhance its educational offerings.

Future plans: To assess the need and evaluate the pros and cons of obtaining and analyzing additional demographic data about students, all for the purpose of achieving the set goals and meeting the needs of students and the community.

Response

UACS has developed a robust mechanism to ensure that programs are executed in a way that motivates students to actively participate in the creation of the learning process. This mechanism includes various elements, such as:

1. Institution-Level Instruction Delivery System: Some courses offer a blended learning approach, combining traditional classroom instruction with online platforms to facilitate interactive and flexible learning. This system includes workshops and seminars, peer-learning sessions, and project-based learning activities.
2. Quality Standards in Teaching: The teaching is conducted in accordance with the higher education curricula and programs accredited by the Ministry of Education and for some schools by the international ACBSP accreditation. Classes are conducted in classrooms through a combination of lectures, problem-solving, and group work. Students ask questions and participate in class discussions, which are a significant part of the learning process. UACS conducts per course and annual faculty evaluations, supports continuous professional development, and the integration of innovative teaching methodologies.
3. UACS Quality Assurance and Self-evaluation Committee organizes semiannually (at minimum) trainings for the teaching staff on innovative teaching methodologies, etc. In the reporting period 3 workshops were held on: 1\) teaching methodologies, 2\) use of AI in teaching and 3\) new possibilities in the on line moodle platform.
4. Examples of Students' Active Participation:

| Response <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• According to the requirements of international accreditation, the School of Business Economics and Management submits evaluation reports every three years. According to these requirements, teaching contents must be continuously adapted to changes in the environment and according to the needs of students. All identified needs for improvements derived from the 360 evaluation system and the measurement of learning outcomes are implemented in them.</li> <li>• All UACS units are integrated into an educational system that places students at the heart of the learning experience. The teaching approach is outcome-oriented, emphasizing the knowledge, skills, and competencies students will have acquired by the time they complete their studies. The Learning Outcomes are measured formatively, summatively, externally, and internationally and are related to the Dublin descriptors from the study programs and the methods for teaching realization and student assessment. These are criteria on which continuous review is based by the ACBSP accreditation board. In this direction, international accreditation contributes to the harmonization of study programs with more developed universities and improves the quality of study programs, as well as increases the visibility of UACS in the European higher education area, improves student mobility, etc.</li> <li>• UACS is also part of the Peregrine Global Testing Services network, which conducts external testing of students who are in their third year. This means that the results of our students are compared with the results of the same tests taken by students from universities in the United States and other countries around the world, i.e., from countries that also apply the Peregrine testing methods. This procedure allows the university to analyze and reassess the curriculum, teaching methods, achievements, successes, as well as the strengths and weaknesses of the teaching contents and the overall quality of education. Peregrine testing reports identify areas where students show the best results, as well as areas that need improvement, ensuring continuous advancement of study programs.</li> <li>• Teaching plans and contents are reviewed annually, before the start of each academic year. The curriculum is prepared through an interdisciplinary approach and is expressed through various professional components that complement the core content of the course.</li> <li>• Teaching is linked to practical work, i.e., it is organized through project activities related to real problems and mandatory practice.</li> <li>• Most of the courses use of case studies and practical problems (see attachment/evidence – Info about case studies and simulations being used during teaching)</li> <li>• To gain skills for solving practical problems, modern tools and technologies are used, and events are organized, such as UACS Entrepreneurship Week and Hackathons, Financial Accounting Competition, Oratory and Communication Skills Competition, etc. This implies active engagement from students throughout the learning process, as well as a different engagement from the teaching staff towards organizing teaching with increased practical work and market relevance of students' knowledge.</li> <li>• The learning process is also advanced through the use of digital technologies. The development of digital content follows best practices for developing digital teaching materials using innovative methods (such as interactivity, gamification, personalization) and commonly accepted formats in line with existing international standards for digital teaching content.</li> </ul> |                                                                                                                            |

UACS culture and expectations, innovative assessment practices, share experiences, and discuss challenges. The mentoring process is also used for the new educators.

2. Trainings Organized by the Quality Assurance and Self-Evaluation Committee (QAC):

- Since 2024, the QAC has played a crucial role in organizing training sessions that focus on various assessment tools and techniques. These trainings cover a wide range of topics, including the design of exams, the use of rubrics, and the implementation of formative and summative assessments.

3. Use of Moodle:

- The teaching staff is trained to use the Moodle platform from basic functions such as uploading slides, lecture notes, laboratory exercise instructions, homework, exam results, but also at a higher level, i.e., integrating the system with traditional teaching: organizing materials according to teaching plans, increasing communication on forums, introducing quizzes and tests, using numerous demos and interactive content, which greatly facilitates the mastering of essential concepts by students.

Assessment Tools and Techniques: Assessment at UACS involves a variety of formal assessment tools, lab exercises (depending on the school and the course), assignments, and projects. This diverse approach ensures that students are evaluated comprehensively and fairly. The methods of assessment and examination for each subject in the study program are outlined below:

- Formal Assessment Tools:

- Mid -Term and Final written exams, quizzes are used to assess students' knowledge and understanding of the subject matter.

- Laboratory Exercises (depending on the school and the course):

- Practical lab sessions are conducted to evaluate students' hands-on skills and their ability to apply theoretical knowledge in practical scenarios.

- Assignments and Projects:

- Students are required to complete assignments and projects that encourage critical thinking, problem-solving, and collaboration. These tasks are designed to mimic real-world challenges and assess students' competencies in a practical context. Since September, 2024 UACS has a mandatory oral presentation of the Projects rule.

Implementation and Continuous Improvement: UACS recognizes the importance of continuous improvement in the assessment process. The following measures are taken to ensure the effectiveness and relevance of assessment methods:

1. Overview of Assessment Methods:

- A comprehensive overview of the methods of assessment and examination for each course in the study program is maintained. This includes detailed descriptions of various formal assessment tools, exercises, assignments, and projects.

2. Feedback and Development:

- Through the Quality Circles and other methods, students are encouraged to provide feedback on the assessment methods and suggest improvements. The QAC reviews this feedback and organizes additional training sessions as needed.

3. Monitoring and Evaluation:

- The QAC will be more active in the future in identifying areas for improvement of the assessment practices that remain aligned with the best educational standards.

In the reporting period, 2 socialisation trainings for the new faculty were held, one each semester, where typically focus is given on internal policies and procedures specifically connected to teaching and evaluation of knowledge. In addition to this Quality Assurance and Self-Evaluation Committee regularly conducts trainings aiming to continuously improve the quality of the education process, as specified in other parts of this report.

During the course, two tests/assessments related to the material are mandatory, i.e. midterm and final exam. The tests contain questions with true/false options, multiple-choice answers, fill-in-the-blank questions, essay questions and critical thinking questions and/or problem solving questions, which are used to check the understanding of the subject matter and the ability to apply the learned concepts to solve problems related to accounting processes in a commercial enterprise. Some courses also have short quizzes during regular classes. Active participation means the effort and interest shown by students in class, including completing assigned homework. In this regard, one of the rules for all integrated units is: A student who is absent from 25% to 50% of the lectures has the right to take the exams but will be denied points for attendance and class participation. A student who is absent from more than 50% of the lectures goes directly to the make up exam.

To increase motivation and engagement in the learning process, students also have the opportunity to earn additional points. Active class participation is encouraged, and exceptional activity is rewarded with a bonus from 1% to 5% of the total points earned. To qualify for this bonus, the student must answer questions posed during the semester, provide comments directly related to the subject matter, and contribute to further discussion of the topic being covered.

Students regularly receive feedback on their work, during class, office hours/consultations or in a written form.

Many policies, including the Code of Ethics and the Uniform Rules for Studying 2024, mandate assessments to be conducted consistently and fairly for all students, without discrimination and/or prejudices.

The grading method is tailored to the objectives of the courses. An Example of Recommended Assessment Method

- |                                       |     |
|---------------------------------------|-----|
| • Attendance and Participation        | 20% |
| • Class Activity for a Grade/Homework | 10% |
| • Project                             | 10% |
| • Midterm Exam                        | 30% |
| • Final Exam                          | 30% |

Within this broad framework the educators have academic freedom to tailor their assessment to the need of the course and the learning objectives.

Students in the second cycle (specialist and master's studies) prepare theses at the end of their education to complete the cycle of studies.

Courses are offered where the lectures and the assessment is carried out by multiple examiners (Corporate Governance, Circular Economy, Microeconomics, Digital Marketing, Internet and Digital Communications, Innovation Management and Creativity, Advance Corporate Finance, Insurance Management, Fraud and ML Prevention).

| Response The monitoring and documentation of students' academic progress are conducted in accordance with the framework established by the Law on Higher Education and the Rules Governing Study for the first, second, and third cycles of studies at the University American College Skopje (UACS). In compliance with the Law on Higher Education, UACS maintains a registry book of enrolled students, a main book of graduated students, and individual student files. The format and methods for maintaining both physical and electronic records for the registry of enrolled students and graduates are maintained in accordance with the Ministry of Education and Science guidelines. In accordance with the aforementioned regulations, each student file is maintained in both paper and electronic formats, allowing for comprehensive tracking of all activities related to the student's academic journey. Additionally, a register of students is maintained, documenting all relevant information, general details, and milestones for each student throughout their studies. CAO is responsible for collecting and monitoring the student's progress and suggests improvements. UACS Registrar, which is responsible for maintenance and verification of all the information (prior to issuing and signing the official documents four eyes principle is implemented). UACS has a dedicated Career Center that actively supports students in securing internships, which are a required part of their academic program. UACS provides academic advising to guide students in their educational journey and professional development. Information about transferring from education institutions within the country is held by the Records Office, while information pertaining to specific educational activities and mobility experiences outside of the country is systematically recorded by the International Office. This file includes all current and past educational activities and mobility records.

In addition, in accordance with the Rules Governing Studies, students are required to complete mandatory internship, which is meticulously recorded for each individual student. UACS provides support to facilitate students' engagement in internship. Special records are maintained for this purpose.

Referring to recognition of informal learning, UACS in 2024 has started a process of analyzing the pros and cons for recognizing informal learning (communication between schools dated 22.11.2024)

Response

The teaching staff's workload is carefully planned to provide a fair division of duties, enabling the provision of high-quality instruction. The amount of teaching hours allotted annually is carefully calibrated to support successful instruction and student involvement, and faculty members are hired in accordance with all applicable legal regulations. This well-rounded strategy improves students' overall educational experience while also assisting in the professional growth of the faculty.

In 2016, UACS adopted the Bylaw on Academic Administrative Load which regulates the number of contact hours for undergraduate and graduate programs, mentorships of Bachelor and Master theses, the expected number of contact hours that professors should have with students, the hours expected to be spent on research and research-related activities, and the number of hours that they are expected to spend on additional activities (administrative work, projects work, and other professional, or scholarly activities) in order to comply with the Labor Act of the Republic of North Macedonia and fulfill the criterion of 40 working hours per week.

However, UACS professors are expected to spend about 20 hours weekly at UACS premises. This equals to 12 teaching hours + consultation with students, and administrative activities. The performance and the overall faculty and staff's workload are monitored on a regular basis, according to the Bylaw on Academic-Administrative Load (AAL), explained in point a. This allows for constant improvement to be made, if necessary, and for assuring quality performance of all faculty members.

UACS takes AAL very seriously. Usually, before the beginning of the academic year, the HR Officer provides an AAL table, in order to present the planned workload of the faculty members to the Provost, and the Dean. This is aimed at giving the professors enough time to perform their activities:

1. Classroom teaching is, by definition, a sole responsibility of the elected and appointed faculty.
2. Student advising and counseling activities are conducted in two ways: 1) through regular consultation hours of professors, and 2) by organizing an advising week, which is further discussed in Standard 6.

3. Scholarly and professional activities - activities that will enhance the depth and scope of their knowledge and that of their disciplines, as well as the effectiveness of their teaching.

4. Community and college service activities – UACS faculty are always part of CSR activities. We participate in annual fundraising, various activities and training of high-school teachers.(For instance, M Dimitrova, F.Ivanovski and M.Bojadjev trained a number of teachers on teaching Entrepreneurship in association with the Ministry of Economy-Agency of Entrepreneurship).

5. All faculty members are invited to participate in administrative activities - for the full-time employees, this is mandatory and it includes: Faculty Council meetings, Department meetings, research committees, etc.

6. Business and industry interactions: We encourage industry relations in two ways: 1) via Business council and meetings with the BC clusters, and 2) via direct links with the industry.

7. Special research programs and projects: We are proud that, through research grants and projects, mostly funded by the EU, hard-working individuals at UACS can earn even double the salary the university pays.

8. Thesis and dissertation supervision and direction, if applicable: All UACS faculty members participate as members of different Master Theses Committees and are selected to serve as members of the Doctoral Committees.

9. Travel to off-campus locations and/or non-traditional teaching, if applicable: In this sense, we can point out that UACS faculty are encouraged to teach abroad.

Part-time faculty members are equal to full-time faculty in all their rights. As mentioned before, part-time faculty members are invited to all faculty and department meetings, while these meetings are mandatory only for the full-time faculty. Besides the teaching process, part-time faculty members (especially those with academic titles Assistant and Associate Professors) participate in research programs and projects, Master and Bachelor theses supervision and, by interacting with the business industry, they make big contributions to the teaching process. Also, part-time faculty members are involved in syllabus development, organization of courses, and defining the workload according to the students' demands.

| Response The University is dedicated to upholding fair, open, and transparent hiring practices that highlight the importance of teaching positions. According to RNM laws, information about job openings is published. The procedure is fully transparent and the hiring decision is shared with all the candidates. All candidates are given equal chances to succeed because recruitment procedures are based on academic credentials and merit. By following set standards, the University not only draws in highly skilled instructors but also creates a welcoming atmosphere that celebrates diversity and encourages career advancement, all of which improve the standard of education that students get. To ensure alignment with the institutional strategic plan and current quality assurance standards, in 2025, the Board of Directors of UACS adopted the revised Human Resources Policy (HR Policy) for faculty and staff, which was previously adopted in 2011.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

| Response              | UACS is committed to the professional growth of its Faculty members, offering them a variety of chances to improve their abilities and stay inspired. Frequent training sessions concentrate on enhancing pedagogical and technical competencies as well as creating proactive and creative teaching strategies. In order to keep faculty members abreast of the most recent developments in education, the institution also regularly assesses their technical proficiency. This dedication not only promotes a culture of ongoing development but also raises the standard of instruction provided to pupils as a whole. UACS apply a permanent support policy for the faculty. Support might include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Sabbatical</li> <li>• Funding for a degree</li> <li>• Funding for conferences and research</li> <li>• Professional development events at UACS</li> </ul> Before the beginning of each semester, UACS organizes a Socialization and Training Seminar for the induction of the new faculty. This Seminar is mandatory for the new members since it provides general information about UACS, all the important information about the UACS Bylaws, faculty's administrative duties, as well as information about using the Moodle platform. Besides the Socialization and Training Seminar, the Dean organizes a meeting with each new faculty member in order to explain to them the course syllabus, and grading, and provide them with examples how the course has been taught, show them the reading and teaching materials, and similar information. UACS provides course monitoring and evaluation through semi-annual and/or annual evaluations and quality circle meetings. UACS has established a Committee for Scientific Research Work and the Commission for Financing Scientific Research Activities and has adopted an act for support for scientific research activities. The Committee for Quality and Self-evaluation organizes trainings on different quality improvement topics (teaching methodologies, research, use of Moodle, AI tools). |

| Response UACS faculty structure is carefully selected, and in accordance with the HR Policy, and the Higher Education Act. Besides this, we follow something that we call “Mercedes policy”. This name has a twofold nature: first, association with high quality; and second, a composition based on three components: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• professionals with significant experience who have further earned a PhD and transitioned into academia</li> <li>• industry professionals that are academically qualified</li> <li>• visiting professors who come from the U.S. and E.U.</li> </ul> UACS courses and programs are designed to offer theoretical and practical knowledge that provides quality in the educational process. Therefore, the structure of the faculty contributes to steering students’ creativity, critical reasoning, and intellectual curiosity. In order to accomplish this, our engaged faculty is composed of full-time faculty - to cover both the theoretical and practical elements, part-time who will be able to transfer the insights and practical knowledge from their respective working environments and fields, and international faculty who will bring insights of international education. Besides this, faculty members are encouraged to invite guest lecturers at least once during the course. The University has a policy of covering the expenses of visiting academic staff. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

| Response University American College Skopje (UACS) maintains a strict policy against all forms of plagiarism. Accordingly, the submission of papers within the educational process requires the candidate to submit an appropriate statement of originality. Mentors place the papers of the first, second and third cycle of studies in the plagiarism system set up by the Ministry of Education and Culture. In addition, UACS has formulated a Policy for the application of artificial intelligence in the educational process, which regulates the use of generative artificial intelligence in the entire educational system of the University. UACS supports the responsible use of generative artificial intelligence tools, solely in accordance with the guidelines set forth in this policy. In doing so, particular attention is paid to restrictions related to information security and accuracy, privacy protection, copyright, academic integrity, as well as overall compliance with regulations, good educational practices, and ethical and moral standards. Within the socialization training, new academic staff is instructed on the above mentioned policies and all the staff is continuously reminded that the most effective prevention of plagiarism and use of AI tools in an improper way is done through proper choice of the topics, proper structure, check drafts or interim work, etc. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |

| Response UACS encompasses an area of 3,549 square meters dedicated to the execution of teaching processes. To properly support the study programs, UACS makes sure that its technical resources—such as libraries, labs, work spaces, and information technology equipment—are adequate. These tools are available to all students and faculty members, including those with special needs. However, improvements can be made in the accessibility of the entrances. UACS has the infrastructure required to support online education, making it well-suited for remote learning. To keep these technical resources adequate and effective and to make sure they continue to satisfy the changing needs of the academic community, the institution regularly monitors them. For the UACS students, the required literature is provided for each student separately, i.e. there is 100% coverage with copies of required literature for the given course program. Usually there are also electronic books available (in the library and on Moodle). More information about the UACS Library is available on https://www.uacs.edu.mk/library. As stated in the previous paragraph, in addition to borrowing copies from the Library, all students who attend the classes for the course program have direct (online) access to the required and additional literature, and to all relevant learning material through the Moodle platform (https://moodle.uacs.edu.mk/login/index.php). For the scientific-research need, UACS provides access to relevant scientific bases for different areas for all students. The literature that is used for the implementation of the program is from renowned global authors from popular publishers such as Pearson, McGraw-Hill, Cengage, and others. The Microsoft Teams electronic platform, which facilitates two-way communication between faculty members and students, is the primary tool used for distance learning. Students can use this platform to gain access to learning resources for specific study topics and participate in extra study exercises. In order to strengthen institutional support and promote equal opportunities, a policy for students with disabilities and special needs was drafted in 2024, and was formally adopted in 2025. Future plans (2027 and on): <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>A process to identify online subscriptions to industry-related periodicals was initiated. The goal is to subscribe to one or more periodicals, provided these subscriptions are deemed beneficial from multiple perspectives.</li> </ul> |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |

6.3. The work of the administrative services is properly organized and is a function of internal quality assurance. In their work, the services take into account flexible ways of learning and teaching as well as the needs of different student populations (for example, students over 25 years old, part-time and working students, students from abroad and students with special needs). The number of employees in the administrative services and their profile is adequate for the number of students of all types of studies. The administrative staff have the opportunity to develop their own competencies.

| Response To keep track of and interact with its alumni UACS has put in place a strong infrastructure. Regular updates on alumni accomplishments, career advancements, and involvement in various academic or professional fields are included in this system. UACS keeps an extensive database that aids in tracking the influence of graduates on the larger community and the institution's ongoing programs through a dedicated alumni office or platform. The Alumni Community Tracking System is an alumni register used to contact members via email, with over 4,100 members currently registered. The alumni community engages in various activities over the past five years, primarily communicated through email, with a secondary channel via the UACS Alumni Facebook group (https://www.facebook.com/UACSAumni) for announcements and event listings. Alumni participate as guest lecturers, contribute to printed and video materials representing the University, attend exclusive alumni events organized by UACS, and engage in other activities of interest. Some examples of alumni events include the 4th of July Alumni Gathering (https://www.instagram.com/uacskopje/p/CuUCk2xMGxq/?img_index=1), a video recording from a UACS Alumni Graduate (https://www.instagram.com/uacskopje/reel/C4xWJBMsVj5/), and a guest speaker for UACS Alumni (https://www.instagram.com/uacskopje/p/C47tb--sbCi/). Within UACS, Delta Mu Delta Pi Alpha is functioning with representatives from graduate students and current students, all having impeccable academic records (satisfying the Delta Mu Delta membership requirements). DMD members regularly meet and organize different types of events and submit annual reports to the DMD US office. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |

| 7.1. The higher education institution regularly collects, analyzes and uses information that is important for the successful implementation of study programs and other activities. Response:

UACS consistently ensures that the data collection and analysis processes are meticulously managed and effectively integrated into the internal quality assurance system. This approach guarantees that the information gathered is relevant and instrumental in the successful implementation of study programs and other institutional activities.

The university's processes for collecting and analyzing data are designed to align with its mission and strategic goals, ensuring that they contribute to the continuous improvement of academic offerings and operational effectiveness.

1. Information Collection System: UACS employs a comprehensive system for gathering data related to student performance, faculty effectiveness, curriculum relevance, and institutional activities. This system includes feedback mechanisms that facilitate the systematic collection of information from students, faculty, alumni, and employers. The university has adopted a 360-degree evaluation policy since 2011, providing a clear and realistic assessment of the performance of faculty, administrative staff, and university leadership. This evaluation process involves feedback from students, management, administration, and deans, ensuring a holistic view of institutional performance. One element that is currently missing from this evaluation process is peer-to-peer evaluations. Incorporating this component could further enhance the evaluation system by providing insights from colleagues who share similar roles and responsibilities. Peer evaluations can offer a unique perspective on an individual's performance, work ethic, collaboration, and contribution to the academic community. While incorporating peer-to-peer evaluations can be beneficial, there are some potential drawbacks to consider, such as Bias and Favoritism, Lack of Objectivity, Potential for Retaliation. Therefore, after thoroughly considering all the pros and cons, UACS shall decide on whether to incorporate this element into the evaluation process.
2. Act Regulating the Process: The institution's data collection and analysis activities are governed by specific regulations, such as Decision on Defining Indicators for Measuring Success, First Cycle. These documents outline the criteria for measuring success in undergraduate and graduate programs, ensuring that the data collected is aligned with academic and institutional objectives.
3. Proof of System Functionality: Accreditation and Certification: UACS is accredited by ACBSP, which validates the institution's commitment to maintaining high standards of quality and the effectiveness of its processes. Standard Operating Procedures (SOPs): UACS has detailed SOPs that guide the data collection and quality assurance processes. Annual Reports: UACS publishes annual reports that provide an overview of performance metrics and outcomes. Performance Metrics: UACS analyzes metrics such as student performance, faculty effectiveness, employment rates of graduates, and research output. Stakeholder Feedback: UACS gathers and analyzes feedback from key stakeholders, including students, faculty, alumni, and employers, to gain valuable insights into the effectiveness of the quality assurance system. This feedback is collected mainly through surveys. Benchmarking: It is difficult to compare UACS performance against other similar institutions because there are no data available. Therefore UACS is part of the Peregrine Global Testing Services network, which conducts external testing of students who are in their third year. This means that the results of our students are compared with the results of the same tests taken by students from universities in the United States and other countries around the world, i.e., from countries that also apply the Peregrine testing methods. This procedure allows the university to analyze and reassess the curriculum, teaching methods, achievements, successes, as well as the strengths and weaknesses of the teaching contents and the overall quality of education. Peregrine testing reports identify areas where students show the best results, as well as areas that need improvement, ensuring continuous advancement of study programs.

In the reporting period (september 2024-august 2025) UACS was working on improving its in house digital tools to monitor and analyse data.

Plans for 2026 and on:

UACS is committed to continuously advancing its in-house digital tools and analytics to monitor and analyze data, thereby enhancing the accuracy and efficiency of its quality assurance system. This is an ongoing process that requires constant improvement and innovation.

Response

UACS ensures that the information collected is meticulously relevant to its profile and study programs. This process includes key indicators such as the profile of the student population, student progress, success, and dropout rates. Data on graduate employment and their careers are also included to provide a comprehensive understanding of the effectiveness of the institution's offerings.

The involvement of both students and staff in these processes is fundamental. Their participation in data provision and analysis, as well as in the planning of activities arising from the data, ensures that the feedback loop is comprehensive and inclusive.

1. Key Indicators of Success: UACS systematically tracks key performance indicators, including student enrollment, graduation rates, and employment outcomes. This data provides insights into the effectiveness of the institution in achieving its educational objectives.
2. Profile of the Student Population: The university collects some demographic data, which helps tailor support services to meet the diverse needs of its students. This includes information on age, gender, and previous educational background. There are possibilities for improvement of this system to include additional demographic info. In the reporting period (2024-2025) this need was discussed at the Quality Assurance and Self-evaluation Committee meetings.

3. Student Progress, Success, and Dropout Rates: UACS monitors the academic journey of its students, identifying patterns that can inform strategies to reduce dropout rates and improve student success. There are possibilities for improvement of this data set, as specified in item 2.9 of this Report. In the reporting period (2024-2025) this need was discussed at the Quality Assurance and Self-evaluation Committee meetings.
4. Degree of Fulfillment of Expectations from Study Programs: Feedback mechanisms such as course evaluations and satisfaction surveys allow UACS to evaluate how well study programs meet the expectations of students. Future plans: There is significant potential to enhance the current process. UACS is considering implementing exit evaluations made upon graduation, but also potentially including additional questions in the current course evaluations.
5. Learning Resources and Support: Regular assessments of learning resources and support systems ensure that students have access to the tools necessary for academic success. This includes libraries, technological resources, and academic advising.

Future plans:

Data on Graduate Employment and Careers: There is informal collection of data about career paths of the students. However, UACS this process can be improved, by maintaining an electronic system to monitor key metrics. Tracking the career paths of graduates will help understand the impact of the programs on the labor market, will contribute to curriculum development and ensure alignment with industry needs.

In 2026-2028 UACS plans to finalize the design and start using Exit Interviews including assigning responsibility for administration and data analysis. It also plans to work on a new system that should enable the monitoring of key metrics, such as the LinkedIn profiles of our students, which would allow real-time tracking of their professional development and progress after graduation. This approach would ensure continuous oversight of the majority of our alumni, given that LinkedIn is practically the dominant tool in the sphere of professional growth and career advancement.

measures to safeguard the personal data of all stakeholders, adhering to both internal policies and external regulatory standards.

UACS's commitment to data security reflects its dedication to maintaining confidentiality and integrity across all forms of information storage and processing, such as:

1. Information Security Measures: UACS has established comprehensive security protocols for both printed and electronic information. This includes stringent access controls, encryption practices, and secure storage solutions for sensitive data such as student records, exam results, and digital communications.
2. Personal Data Protection Policies: The institution's practices for protecting personal data are governed by regulations such as a PLAN for the Establishment of the System, Technical and Organizational Measures to Ensure the Confidentiality and Security of Personal Data Processing 2011 and 2011 Act on Technical and Organizational Measures to Ensure the Confidentiality and Security of Personal Data. These documents outline technical and organizational measures to ensure the confidentiality of personal data, aligning with legal standards and best practices.
3. Proof of System Functionality: Documents such as Procedure for Maintaining Student Records 2018 and Rulesbook on the Methods of Creating a Backup, Archiving and Storing, as well as Restoring Saved Personal Data at UACS 2011, provide evidence of UACS's functional and systematic approach to information security. These procedures ensure the regular backup of data and secure storage of student files, minimizing the risk of data breaches or loss.
4. Ongoing Monitoring and Updates: UACS continually monitors its information security measures and updates its practices to address emerging threats. This proactive approach ensures that the institution remains vigilant in protecting the personal data of its students, faculty, and staff.
5. UACS has adopted the Archiving Procedure and Manual on the Method and Technique for Receiving and Archiving Acts of UACS-2011. These documents detail the procedures for archiving and managing institutional records.

Plans for 2025, i.e. UACS to update the above procedures in line with changes in legislation were done, new updated document available below.

their research findings. Additionally, the university's news section highlights calls for collaboration with PhD and doctoral students, indicating active efforts to involve doctoral candidates in research dissemination.

3. Undergraduate Studies: Preparations are underway for the Student Conference Intersections 2026: Bridging Student Research and Academic Excellence. This forthcoming event is designed to provide a structured platform for undergraduate students to showcase their research achievements, ensuring visibility and accessibility through online publication.
4. Doctoral Dissertations: While UACS demonstrates a strong commitment to sharing research outputs, there is no formal external or internal policy requiring doctoral dissertations to be published on the university's website prior to defense. The national legislation requires that doctoral candidates publish at least two scholarly works before the public defense of their dissertation. These works must be either published or accepted for publication in scientific journals with an international editorial board, or included in the proceedings of international scientific conferences. The University website does provide transparency by listing defended doctoral dissertations with their titles, as well as publishing accepted dissertation topics. This practice ensures visibility of doctoral research and contributes to academic accountability, though it does not fully meet the standard of requiring publication before defense.
5. Master Thesis: Typically, parts of the master thesis, i.e. its research are frequently developed into academic publications, co-authored by professors and students, and submitted to national and international journals. This practice ensures that valuable research outcomes are disseminated widely and contribute to the broader academic community, reflecting both academic mentorship and student achievement. A significant number of published works typically emerge from master's theses, both during the writing process and after the defense. Beginning with the Fall 2025–Spring 2026 academic year, the University initiated a systematic process of gathering information on these publications. Initial data will be available and reported in the next self-evaluation cycle

UACS has adopted a Policy on Internationalization and its Measurement. This Policy emphasizes the importance of expanding international reach and fostering global partnerships. It outlines the vision, goals, and operational framework of our international initiatives. The Policy was adopted in 2025.

A special body, currently known as the International Academic Council (IAC), has been instituted within the UACS. The IAC is responsible for international cooperation and internationalization. The current structure of the Council has been updated through the incorporation of new members, bringing fresh perspectives and further strengthening UACS's strategic international collaborations.

| Response In the focus of international academic experience, UACS offers a unique double degree program in partnership with Rennes School of Business in Rennes, France , Tor Vergata University in Rome, Italy, and Università Cattolica in Milan, Italy. Through these partnerships UACS allows students to earn dual qualifications that enhance their global employability and cultural understanding. These partnerships reflect UACS's commitment to providing high-quality education with a strong international perspective. UACS students can use Erasmus+ services, which is a great opportunity to spend between 3 and 12 months in another European country, and have it count towards their degree. The students get to experience another culture and a new way of looking at their subject. In 2024, a collaboration between the Pi Alpha Chapter of Delta Mu Delta at the School of Business Economics and Management, University American College Skopje, and the Kappa Beta Delta Chapter of Delta Mu Delta at Colorado Technical University.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
